

It is so easy to be distracted by many things that relate to the service of the church, and we don't want to miss the most crucial focus of our worship. Consider an interview with the baseball player who hit the game-winning home run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth to win the World Series. How would the hero respond if the first question that he was asked was: "What do you think of this marvelous stadium?"

In a similar way, when we approach this table, we don't want to lose sight of the glory of Christ's victorious sacrifice for us. He speaks to us, "Look! I bled and died for you!" Let us pay Him the tribute that is due.
