

The Christmas season is a lot about what you believe and who you believe in.

I constantly need help with my belief, and you may as well.

But I believe very strongly in three main principles:

- 1) This universe was created by a Great Designer whose power renders us materially insignificant in comparison.
- 2) This universe has Good and Evil in it (for whatever complicated reasons): and I choose Good no matter what happens.
- 3) There is no greater demonstration of Good than that of the Great Designer coming to earth and suffering for us because of his love for us as significant individual souls.

Perhaps that is all I need to believe.

This morning we worship in this communion the fact that there is absolutely nothing else that can compare to this.
